the sacramental theology of marriage offers a comprehensive vision of the dogmatic theology of marriage it takes into account biblical and patristic sources the teaching of the magisterium with particular emphasis on the councils of trent and vatican ii and the most important contemporary theological contributions it begins with a vision of the sacrament of marriage as the sacrament that integrates the order of creation into the order of sacraments this dual dimension of marriage justifies the division of the book into two parts marriage as a sacrament of creation and marriage as a sacrament of redemption instituted by Christ to describe the coordinates of marriage in creation the book refers to St Augustine the goods of marriage St Thomas Aquinas the ends of marriage and modern personalism as reflected in the second vatican council the gifts of marriage the book also draws on the theology of St Bonaventure who emphasized the institution of marriage by God in creation the presentation of marriage as a sacrament of the new law is rooted in the way Christ lived the various meanings of the body marriage's foundation in the body and in the experience of love sheds new light on the key milestones of its sacramentality its matter and form its signification the grace it transmits its liturgy and ministers its indissolubility its role in building up the church and the path of holiness it opens to the spouses in all of this marriage emerges as a pivotal sacrament for articulating Christianity's relationship to the cosmos and to society the sacramental theology of marriage includes modern philosophical and theological explorations of the language of the body and the meaning of love including the proposal of St John Paul II it also outlines the main principles for the pastoral care of marriage and family in an inculturation model of the catholic marriage ritual David William Antonio presents a model of how the catholic ritual of marriage may be adapted to the language culture and traditions of a particular people specifically the Ilocanos of northern Luzon in the Philippines vatican II called for the revision and adaptation of the rite of marriage exhorting local churches to develop their own rites suited to their people's particular customs and traditions the work of preparing a rite of marriage for a particular region cannot be limited to merely translating the typical edition there has to be a thorough examination of both the editio typica and the people's religious and cultural traditions the socio-economic and political realities that confront them attending to the positive values expressed therein only a dialogical process such as this will guarantee a liturgy that is faithful to the christian tradition and meaningful to a given people an inculturation model of the catholic marriage ritual will serve as a model for people of other cultures who have to do similar liturgical preparation and will be important especially to churches whose membership includes people who experienced colonization but never lost the riches of their own cultures in the blending of cultures and beliefs that followed
